

TWO NEW EPISCOPAL DISTRICTS CREATED

Triennial Convention Elects Bishops for Panama Canal Zone and Hayti.

THREE OTHERS SELECTED

Rapid Progress Made in Revision of the Prayer Book by House of Deputies.

DENVER, Oct. 18.—Bishops to three old established and two new missionary districts of the Episcopal Church were elected today by the House of Bishops of the Church and reported to the Triennial General Convention, sitting here. Their ratification by the House of Deputies is necessary but is largely a formality and is expected next Tuesday.

Bishops were elected to the districts of Utah, the Philippine Islands and Liberia, and the new districts of the Panama Canal Zone and Hayti. The Right Rev. Thomas J. Garland, Suffragan Bishop of the diocese of Pennsylvania, was named as Bishop of Utah. The Pennsylvania diocese will elect its own new suffragan under the canons of the church.

To take charge of the district of Liberia, succeeding the late Bishop Ferguson, who was a negro, the Rev. W. H. Owers of Bradford, Pa., was elected. The Rev. Mr. Owers is a white man, but the House of Bishops plans to elect as his assistant a negro suffragan, probably a native Liberian. The Rev. Samuel W. Grice of Petersburg, Va., was named Bishop of Hayti, which was set apart during this convention as a separate missionary district. It formerly was a part of the Porto Rico district, but because of the lack of direct transportation between the two islands and for the interests of the Haytian church it was decided to name a resident here.

Wisconsin Man to Panama. To the Panama Canal Zone, also created a missionary district this year, Dr. James Craig Morris of Madison, Wis., was elected.

Dr. Gouverneur Frank Mosher, now serving in Kiang-su, China, was elected Bishop of the Philippines. The elections took place in St. Paul's Cathedral, following celebration of the communion service by Bishop Thomas F. Gailor of Tennessee, chairman of the House of Bishops. With one exception several ballots were necessary on each of the five elections.

It had been expected that the Bishop also would be elected to the missionary district of Salina, Kan., to succeed Bishop Sage, who died lately. It was decided, however, to place the district temporarily under the supervision of Bishop James Wise of Kansas.

Revision of the prayerbook and the report of the church pension fund committee occupied the convention a large part of the day. The House of Deputies this morning made good progress with prayerbook revision, despite keen opposition to a majority of the changes proposed. New prayers were adopted for State legislatures, courts of justice, the country, the church, missions, in time of calamity, the army, the navy, Memorial Day, children, Christian service, social justice, "every man and his work" and in time of great sickness and mortality.

The House of Bishops began work on those parts of the prayer book already revised by the House of Deputies, expecting to complete that work early next week.

Aid for Aged Clergy.

The deputies this afternoon concurred in a resolution by the House of Bishops to use the 1907 convention fund of about $400,000 to provide relief for those clergy who were aged or infirm when the present pension system became operative and for their families. It was suggested to the House by Southern and Western delegates that the pension fund trustees be permitted some latitude in pensioning ministers, because of the small pensions allowed, so they might serve in parishes in need of preachers and at the same time add something to their incomes.

A move to investigate and take legislative action in the next convention on the Rochdale (England) cooperative movement was made in the House of Deputies to-day. The movement is for closer relationship between all classes and looks eventually to the establishment of cooperative stores and similar benefits. A commission will be named, if the House of Bishops concurs, to inquire into the movement and report in 1922.

With both Philadelphia and Portland, Ore., asking for the 1923 convention, agitation started to-day to have the meeting held earlier in the year because clerical districts it is said, find they can best take their vacations in the summer and because a late convention interferes with the fall work of farmers and the business of merchants and professional men who may be lay delegates. Both houses agreed to end the present convention next Friday.

GOV. SMITH OPENS ATTACK ON HEARST

a scheme for financial relief for the traction companies.

After talking about the defeat of some of the welfare bills advocated by him last winter and referring to the local campaign the Governor began to lead up to the matter that was next to his heart. The Governor described the establishment of the Council of Farms and Markets and continued:

"Now, this talk about why don't the Governor do this or that, with regard to the Department of Agriculture—the reason is that the Governor is without the power to do it, by the law of this State; the only thing I can do to the Council of Farms and Markets or any of its related bureaus, is to sign the appropriation bill providing for their salary and expenses, and that instrument was so drawn that I was obliged to stand for some of the things that were in it that I don't think ought to be in it, and I could not take them out without crippling important bureaus of the department.

"I think it is a mean man, I think it is a particularly low type of man, that will lead anybody to believe that there is something that can be done for them that is impossible. To serve his own purpose, and to serve his own ends, he may, for the time being, pose as their friend, but in the last analysis he is their enemy. You know what the Bible says about the Pharisees of old. They tendered a lip service to Almighty God, but their hearts were black because they were doing it selfishly.

Refused to Pay Price.

"Of course that selfish attack in the New York Evening Journal would never have been made upon me if I had shown the proper degree of subservience to the owner of the paper, a subservience that carries a public man to the very point of humiliation. But I refused to pay the price."

This last declaration was snapped out with a vigor that brought a round of applause. Women in various parts of the room were calling "Bravo! bravo!"

The Governor continued: "Next, I know that you have all been students of the affairs that have been going on, and that you have followed them cautiously. Did you notice that the attack did not begin until I had appointed Judge Luce? There was just as much sincerity in that attack as there is in the one that is being made upon the same Judge by the same gentleman in the same paper to-day. Because, three years ago, when Judge Luce was the candidate of the Democratic party in this county and in Bronx county for Justice of the Supreme Court he was endorsed by the Independence League, and here is the ballot."

"So that which he did to render him unfit he must have done in the last three years; and undoubtedly it was his acceptance from the hands of an appointment to the Supreme Court. I was asked to pick the man who in my opinion and in my judgment would go to work and do the business of the Supreme Court, and who measured up to it, and I selected Robert L. Luce."

Justice Luce, who has been bitterly attacked in the Hearst newspapers and who was sitting near the Governor, smiled grimly. The Governor then turned light of the attack on James A. Foley, the Tammany candidate for Surrogate, said:

"There is as much sincerity in the attack as there is in the attack on my friend, Jim Foley. I can think of nothing as bad as that. Nothing! He is the man who, above all other men in the Legislature, above all other men in the State, made the largest and the greatest contribution to anything that means Democratic success by standing for what is right. And the awful crime, the awful offense, the mortal sin that he committed grows out of the fact that the girl of his heart happens to be the stepdaughter of the leader."

Next the Governor sought to minimize the criticisms on the nomination of Irwin Untermyer. Mr. Untermyer himself and Mrs. Untermyer, who sat at the immediate left of the toastmaster, joined heartily in the laughter. On the floor the women applauded.

Feels Hurt in Heart.

"While I am treating this matter facetiously I would not have one of you go away from here to-day without knowing that I felt injured in my heart on the attack upon me for one great reason, and that was that it looked like an attack upon my loyalty to the kind of people I came from."

"And what is particularly distressing is to have that attack come from the owner of the Journal and the American."

The Governor referred to the pressure he had been subjected to in Albany, that he had no more than three days vacation at a time because of the unrest around the State. "When I was called upon for assistance in the small municipalities," he said, "I had to sit up nights and think the situation over. I could not see lives and property destroyed, and on the other hand I did not want to incite the working classes to riot. It was a hard, tedious job."

The speaker said he had received no cooperation from the Legislature and added that he was speaking slowly, deliberately in a time like this to be subjected to an unjust and unfair and unscrupulous assault from anybody, and I felt it worse when I looked at the children."

The Governor seemed to choke as he made this apparent reference to the pictures of emaciated boys and girls, whose condition was attributed to the high cost of milk. He stopped suddenly and dropped the subject. After congratulating the women for their enthusiasm he sat down.

Issues Debate Challenge.

Then a thought came to him and he got up again, speaking slowly, deliberately this challenge: "There is just one other thing I want to say. I am not unmindful of the fact that my frank and open and honest talk to-day to you is bound to subject me to a further burning criticism. Wait until I tell you, so that there will be no misunderstanding about it. I say now that at any time before election, or at any time after election, I stand ready to meet Mr. Hearst in any part of this city or State if he is willing to meet me."

"My friends will hire the hall; he will get half the tickets; he will get the assurance of an absolutely fair, square deal. I have been in public life now for nearly twenty years, elected public life. He can get up on the platform and he can ask me any question he likes about my public or my private life, if he will let me do the same."

THIEVES LEAVE TOOLS FOR A RETURN VISIT

Inquisitive Engineer Averts Columbia Building Robbery.

A set of burglar's tools, comprising a jimmy, sledge hammer and crowbar, was exhibited at Police Headquarters yesterday as evidence that the men who have been looting down town office and left buildings had been frustrated in a plan to visit the Columbia Building at Howard street and Broadway. The outfit was found by Daniel A. Raftery, engineer of the structure. Although the police have had a sharp watch on the building, which is tenanted by the New York Telephone Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company, the burglars failed to return. Raftery observed one man standing near the doorway when he came out with the tools, which had been wrapped in paper and hidden in the hallway. He gave the police a fairly accurate description of the man, who walked rapidly away when the engineer approached him.

Picture Frame Strike Goes On.

The strike of the picture frame workers appeared to be no nearer adjustment yesterday than for days previous. The Picture Frame Manufacturers' Association, standing solidly upon the dairy principle of inflexible championship of the open shop and in opposition to collective bargaining have refused to abandon any part of their position. The men, contending for more pay up to $12 a week and for shorter hours withal, have rejected advice to ameliorate their demands.
